- Gen Ed Reflection Essay

During my time at ISU, I have learned a lot from each general education course. For example, the lessons I learned during my Economics courses have helped me understand the reasons why some engineers will use certain technologies rather than better options. When the cost of a technology or piece of hardware is a factor, it will determine how the software is created. The lessons learned in general education courses also apply to general social context. For example, I understand how engineering technology impacts the work of other fields, and how the technical aspects play into how business majors will calculate certain values or complete transactions. My current goals are to get a starting position in the engineering field and learn about all my options. I currently do not have a choice company or working environment. My goal is to simply figure out the paths I could take.
